INTRODUCTION

Why Most Women Lose Men in Their DMs

You met him. He seems promising. Maybe he has money. Maybe he has potential. Either way, you like him.

Then you open your phone to text him and suddenly your brain goes blank. What do you say? How do you say it? Do you reply fast or wait? Do you use emojis or keep it dry?

Most women lose good men not because they are not attractive enough. They lose them because they do not know how to communicate through a screen. And in 2025, 80% of attraction happens through your phone before you even meet in person.

This vault is your cheat code. Over 50 ready to use messages for every situation you will face when dealing with a man. You do not need to think. You do not need to stress. Just find your situation, copy the message, adjust the name, and send.

These are not random lines pulled from the internet. These are tested messages that real women have used to build attraction, maintain interest, and get results. Some are subtle. Some are bold. All of them work.

The woman who controls the conversation controls the relationship.

CHAPTER 1

First Contact Messages — Making Him Notice You

The first message sets the tone for everything. Too eager and you look desperate. Too cold and he moves on. The goal is to be warm, interesting, and slightly mysterious.

When He Follows You on Instagram

Do not rush to DM him. Let him see your stories first. If he reacts to a story, wait 2 to 4 hours then reply:

"Haha, you noticed that? Most people miss the details."

This makes him feel special for noticing something, and now he wants to prove he is attentive.

"I do not usually reply to story reactions but yours made me smile. What is your name?"

This creates exclusivity. He thinks he is different from the other men in your DMs.

When You Meet Him at an Event

You exchanged numbers. Now what? Wait until the next morning, then send:

"Hey [name], it was nice meeting you yesterday. You had really good energy. Hope you got home safe."

Short, warm, and it puts you in his head first thing in the morning. The phrase 'good energy' is key because it compliments who he is, not what he has.

"I just remembered our conversation about [topic]. You actually knew what you were talking about. That is rare."

Men love being told they are knowledgeable. This message makes him want to impress you more.

When Someone Introduces You

"Hi [name], [mutual friend] told me I should talk to you. I can already tell they have good taste in people."

Light, playful, and it immediately creates a connection through the mutual friend without being too forward.

CHAPTER 2

Building Interest — Making Him Want More

You have his attention. Now you need to keep it. The biggest mistake women make at this stage is being too available. The second biggest mistake is being too distant. You need to find the sweet spot.

When He Asks What You Are Doing

Never say 'nothing.' Even if you are lying on your bed watching Netflix, never say nothing. Try:

"Just got back from [activity]. Still winding down. What about you?"

This makes you sound active and interesting. It does not matter if the activity is the gym, a friend's house, or grocery shopping. What matters is that you sound like someone with a life.

"Reading something interesting actually. Do you read?"

This positions you as intellectual. If he says yes, you have a conversation. If he says no, you just became the most interesting person in his phone.

When the Conversation Gets Dry

"You know what, I just had the craziest thought about you. But I will keep it to myself."

This is a pattern interrupt. His brain will not let him rest until he finds out what you were thinking. He will chase the answer.

"I feel like you are the type of person who [fun assumption about him]. Tell me I am wrong."

Men love being read. They also love proving you wrong. Either way, the conversation is alive again.

When You Want Him to Call

"I want to tell you something but it is better heard than read. Call me when you are free."

Do not ask him to call. Tell him to call. The 'something to tell you' creates urgency. When he calls, share something light and interesting, not serious. The goal was just to get him on the phone.

CHAPTER 3

Flirting Scripts — Making Him Think About You at Night

Flirting is an art. Done right, it makes a man obsessed. Done wrong, it makes you look like you are trying too hard. The key is to be suggestive without being explicit. Let his imagination do the work.

Subtle Compliments That Hit Different

"You have this energy that is hard to explain. Like you walk into a room and the temperature changes."

This is not about his looks or his money. It is about his presence. Men rarely get compliments like this and it stays in their head for days.

"I was telling my friend about you and I realized I was smiling the whole time. That is your fault."

This tells him three things: you talk about him to your friends (social proof), he makes you happy (emotional validation), and you are not trying to hide it (confidence).

Playful Teasing

"You are actually funnier than I expected. I thought fine men were supposed to be boring."

This is the perfect backhanded compliment. You called him fine while also challenging him. He will try harder to be entertaining.

"If you keep talking like this I might actually start to like you. And I do not like anybody."

Creates scarcity. He thinks you are hard to impress, which makes him value your attention more.

Late Night Energy

"I cannot sleep and it is somehow your fault. My brain keeps replaying our last conversation."

Intimate without being inappropriate. It tells him he is on your mind without crossing any lines.

"Do you ever just think about someone and smile for no reason? Asking for a friend."

Classic. Light. Effective. The 'asking for a friend' adds humor and plausible deniability while making the message obvious.

CHAPTER 4

The Art of Indirect Asking — Getting What You Want Without Saying It

This is the chapter that separates amateurs from professionals. Any woman can ask a man for money. But a smart woman makes the man offer without her ever having to open her mouth.

The secret is storytelling. You do not ask. You paint a picture. You share a situation. You let him come to the conclusion himself. When he offers, it feels like his idea. And men are always more generous when they think it was their idea.

When You Need Help With Something

"Ugh, I have been trying to sort out [thing] all week. It is stressing me out. I do not even know where to start."

You are not asking him to solve it. You are sharing your stress. If he likes you, his instinct will be to step in and help. If he asks how he can help, you can then be specific.

When You Want Him to Take You Out

"My friend just went to [nice restaurant/place] and the pictures looked amazing. I have been craving something like that all week."

You are not saying 'take me out.' You are expressing a desire. If he is interested and has sense, he will say 'let me take you there.' If he does not, you know where you stand.

When Your Phone/Laptop Has Issues

"My phone has been acting up so bad lately. The screen freezes at the worst times. I am managing it for now sha."

The 'I am managing it for now' is powerful. It shows you are not begging. You are coping. A generous man will see an opportunity to be the hero.

When Rent or Bills Come Up

"This month came for my neck wallahi. Between [expense 1] and [expense 2], I am just looking at my account and laughing."

Humor is key here. You are not crying. You are not desperate. You are laughing about a tough situation. This keeps you attractive while letting him know the door is open for him to step in.

A man who genuinely cares about you does not need you to beg. He needs you to let him know the door is open.

CHAPTER 5

Maintaining Interest — Keeping Him Hooked Long Term

Getting a man's attention is one thing. Keeping it is a different skill entirely. Most women know how to start strong but fade after a few weeks because they run out of things to say or they become too predictable.

The messages in this chapter are designed for the long game. Use them to keep the spark alive after the initial excitement fades.

The Random Check In

"I just randomly thought of you and decided to say hi. No reason. Just hi."

Simple. Unexpected. Powerful. This works because it is low effort but high impact. He will spend the rest of the day smiling.

The Appreciation Message

"I do not say this enough but I genuinely appreciate you. You make things better without even trying."

Men are starved of genuine appreciation. Most people only tell them what they want from them. When you tell a man you appreciate him with no agenda attached, it hits different.

When He Has Been Distant

"Hey stranger. I noticed you have been quiet. Hope everything is good on your end. No pressure, just checking."

This is better than 'why have you not called me' or 'you have been ignoring me.' It shows maturity and emotional control. It also makes him feel slightly guilty without you playing victim.

"I am not going to lie, I kind of miss your energy. But I am sure you have your reasons. Whenever you are ready."

Vulnerable but not desperate. You are telling him you miss him while also showing you are not going to fall apart without him. This pulls men back faster than anger ever will.

When You Want to See Him

"When are you going to come and see me? I am starting to think you forgot what I look like."

Playful pressure. It is a request disguised as humor. He will laugh and then start making plans.

CHAPTER 6

When Things Get Tricky — Scripts for Difficult Situations

Not every conversation is smooth. Sometimes he says something that annoys you. Sometimes he does something disrespectful. Sometimes you need to set a boundary without losing him. These scripts help you navigate the hard moments.

When He Cancels Plans

"Oh okay, no worries. I will make other plans then. Let me know when you are free."

Short. Unbothered. No guilt tripping. This response makes him realize you have other options and you are not sitting around waiting for him. He will reschedule faster than if you had expressed anger.

When He Disrespects You

"I like you but I will not tolerate being spoken to like that. If that is the energy, we can pause this conversation and pick it up when you are in a better space."

Direct but not aggressive. You are setting a boundary while leaving the door open for him to correct himself. This is how high value women handle disrespect.

When He Asks for Inappropriate Photos

"Lol, you are funny. You have not even taken me to dinner yet and you want pictures? Let us fix your priorities first."

Shuts it down with humor. You did not insult him, you did not get angry, but you made it clear that is not happening. And you redirected to something that benefits you (dinner).

When He Compares You to Other Women

"That is interesting. But I am not other women. You are either here for me or you are not. Which one?"

Clean. Confident. No room for games. This shows you know your worth and you do not compete.

When You Want to End Things Gracefully

"I have enjoyed getting to know you but I do not think we are on the same page. I wish you the best genuinely."

No drama. No long paragraph. No blame. This is the exit of a woman who knows there are other men out there. And ironically, this is the message that makes them come back.

The way you leave says more about you than the way you entered.

FINAL WORDS

You now have over 50 messages that cover almost every situation you will face when dealing with a man. But here is the most important thing I want you to remember:

These scripts are tools, not crutches. The goal is not to become a robot who copies and pastes messages forever. The goal is to train your brain to think this way naturally. After using these scripts for a few weeks, you will notice that you start composing your own messages with the same energy and structure.

The woman who knows what to say at the right time is the woman who wins. And now that woman is you.

Words are the most powerful weapon in a woman's arsenal. Use them wisely.
