INTRODUCTION

Lagos Is Full of Pretenders

Let me paint a picture you already know. He shows up in a nice car. Expensive watch. Clean shoes. He talks about business deals and investments. He takes you to nice restaurants and orders without looking at the menu. You think you have finally found a rich man.

Six months later, you discover the car is rented. The watch is fake. The business deals were fantasies. And the restaurant bills? He put those on a credit card he cannot pay off.

Lagos is a city of packaging. Abuja too. And the internet has made it worse. Any man with a good barber, rented clothes, and a borrowed car can look wealthy for exactly long enough to waste your time.

This guide teaches you how to see through the packaging. How to identify real wealth versus fake wealth within the first few interactions. You will learn what to look for, what questions to ask, and what red flags to never ignore.

If you cannot tell the difference between real and fake, you will waste years on the wrong men.

CHAPTER 1

What Real Wealth Looks Like

Before you can spot fake wealth, you need to understand what real wealth actually looks like. And here is the surprising part: it often does not look like what you expect.

Quiet Confidence

Truly wealthy men do not need to tell you they are wealthy. They do not name drop. They do not flash. They do not list their assets in conversation. Their confidence comes from knowing, not showing. If a man is constantly talking about money, he probably does not have as much as he claims.

Consistency Over Flash

A fake rich man has big moments followed by long silences. He will spend $500,000 one night and disappear for three weeks. A real rich man is consistently generous. Not always extravagant, but steady. He does not need a special occasion to be thoughtful.

Real Assets, Not Just Lifestyle

Pay attention to what he owns versus what he rents. Does he own his apartment or lease it? Does he own his car outright? Does he talk about investments, properties, or business operations? Real wealth is built on assets. Fake wealth is built on appearances.

His Circle

Look at his friends. Wealthy men tend to have wealthy friends. If all his friends are broke but he claims to be rich, something is not adding up. Also notice how his friends treat him. Do they defer to him with respect? Or do they seem like they are all performing the same act?

CHAPTER 2

Red Flags That Scream Fake

Red Flag 1: He Is Always 'About to Close a Deal'

Every conversation involves some big deal that is about to happen. Next week he is getting paid. Next month the contract lands. But somehow, the deal never closes. Real businessmen close deals. They do not constantly advertise upcoming ones.

Red Flag 2: He Only Takes You to Public Places

He loves restaurants, clubs, and events. But he never invites you to his home. He never takes you to his office. He never introduces you to his family or close friends. Why? Because those are the places where the mask falls off.

Red Flag 3: He Gets Angry When You Ask Questions

When you casually ask about his work or finances and he gets defensive, something is wrong. A man who is secure in his wealth has no problem discussing it. A man who is faking will treat your questions like an interrogation because he does not have real answers.

Red Flag 4: His Lifestyle Has No Backend

He has an iPhone 15 Pro Max but his apartment has no AC. He wears designer shoes but takes public transport when he thinks you are not around. He shows you bank alerts but his account balance is always near zero after the alert. These inconsistencies reveal the truth.

Red Flag 5: He Borrows From You Early

If a 'rich' man asks to borrow money from you within the first few months, run. Not walk. Run. Real wealthy men have access to capital. They have savings. They have credit. They do not need to borrow from a woman they just started dating.

Red Flag 6: Social Media Does Not Match Reality

His Instagram shows private jets and champagne. But when you are with him, the lifestyle looks very different. He posts photos in hotel lobbies but never checks in. He takes photos with cars he does not own. If his online life is significantly better than his real life, he is performing.

CHAPTER 3

Smart Questions That Reveal the Truth

You do not need to interrogate him like a police officer. The smartest questions sound like normal conversation but reveal everything. Here are questions that separate real from fake.

About His Work

"How did you get started in your industry?"

A man with a real business will have a detailed origin story. He will talk about challenges, lessons, and growth. A man who is faking will give vague answers. 'I just started and it blew up' with no specifics.

"What is the hardest part of running your business?"

Real entrepreneurs have real problems. Staffing issues. Cash flow challenges. Market changes. If he cannot name a single hard part, his 'business' might not be real.

About His Lifestyle

"Where do you see yourself in five years?"

Listen carefully. Real wealth thinks in terms of growth, expansion, legacy. Fake wealth thinks in terms of consumption: bigger cars, more trips, designer clothes. The answer tells you whether his money is building or burning.

"Do you invest in anything?"

Wealthy men invest. Real estate, stocks, businesses, land. If his only 'investment' is crypto he bought once and forgot about, that tells you something.

The Time Test

You do not have to figure everything out in one conversation. The best test is time. Give it 3 to 4 weeks of observation. Watch if his lifestyle is consistent or if it fluctuates wildly. Watch if he can maintain generosity or if it was just a first impression play. Fake wealth cannot sustain itself. Real wealth does not have to try.

Time reveals what words try to hide.

CHAPTER 4

How to Protect Yourself From Time Wasters

Never Invest More Than He Does

If you are spending money to impress a man (buying new outfits, paying for your own transport to see him, lending him money), you are investing more than he is. That is backwards. The man should always be the heavier investor in the early stages.

Keep Your Options Open

Until a man has proven himself over time (not weeks, months), keep talking to other people. Do not go exclusive with a man who has not earned it. The moment you close your options for an unproven man, you lose all your leverage.

Trust Actions Over Words

He can tell you he is rich every day. What does he actually do? Does he send money when you mention a need? Does he plan dates and pay without hesitation? Does he follow through on promises? Actions are the only currency that matters.

Talk to Older Women

Your aunties, older cousins, and experienced friends have seen every version of the fake rich man. They can spot red flags you would miss because they have lived through it. Do not be too proud to ask for advice from women who have been in the game longer than you.

Walk Away Fast

The moment you confirm a man is fake, leave. Do not try to fix him. Do not think 'maybe he will change.' Do not feel sorry for him. Every day you spend with a pretender is a day you could have spent meeting someone real. Your time is your most valuable asset. Guard it.

The best detector is not a technique. It is the willingness to accept what you see and act on it.
